INTRODUCTORY.

Silas Brown, Jr., a record of whose descendants is given in the following pages, was the eldest son of Silas Brown, Sr., who was at one time a Lieutenant in Captain Jonathan Wate's Company, in Colonel Ezra Meigs' Regiment, and took part in the expedition to Stillwater and Saratoga during the Revolutionary War; was present at the battle of Saratoga and the surrender of Burgoyne, and conducted a part of the prisoners then captured to Hartford, Conn. Rufus Brown, a brother of Lieutenant Silas Brown, Sr., was also a soldier, and was present at Fort William Henry when that fortification was captured by the Indians. Silas Brown, Sr., was the third son of John Brown, who also seems at one time to have been a soldier, since tradition says that he was captured by the Indians in the French and Indian War and taken to Canada, where, after having been detained as a prisoner for some time, he was exchanged and released. I have been unable to ascertain definitely who was John's father, but it is altogether probable that John was the youngest son of James Brown, of Deerfield, Mass., since it is certain that James Brown, of Deerfield, had a son named John, who was born in 1695, and our ancestor John was born in about that year. The identity of name and date of birth, as well as the propinquity of Deerfield to Northfield, where John resided, lead me to think that there is little doubt upon the point. Nothing can be ascertained in regard to the ancestors of James Brown, and nothing in regard to himself, further than that he resided in Hatfield, Mass., in 1669; was married in Springfield, Mass., in 1674; removed to Deerfield, Mass., in about 1683, and went thence to Colchester, Conn. I have sought diligently to trace the line beyond James, and to ascertain the founder of the family in America, but thus far without success; and should this record fall into the hands of any one who can aid me in the effort, I should be very glad to have the assistance.

Assuming that James was the father of John, I give what I have been able to gather of the families of James, John and Silas, Sr., before giving the descendants of Silas Brown, Jr., whose complete Family Record this is intended to be.

A. C. BROWN.
